“ I grew up down the street from Jackie in Toronto, Ontario (Canada). She was known for her long, blonde hair and bell bottom pants. As teens we put skits on in her parents garage. She loved skating and going to the movies. And talked endlessly of wanting to be a nurse when she grew up. She was sweet natured, a christian, went to church regularly and could often be seen practicing authentic Irish dancing after supper from the steps of her parents home. She was a really special person back then and I thought of her often over the years. Our lives went in different directions. I moved away. I am grateful we were finally able to reconnect just a few years ago. I will miss her warmth and caring ways. She will never be forgotten.
